WLI FACULTY

Prof Stella C. Chiemeka, KSM

Vice Chancellor - University of Delta, Agbor, Delta State, Nigeria.

Computertechnology can automate many of the tasks that are traditionally associated with marketing, such as creating and distributing advertising materials, tracking customer responses, and managing customer databases. This what teach in the Institute. Women must have an environment that removes physical and social barriers to their participation so they may realize their full potential in the market. The Institute for Women's Leadership is one of its kind as it is a platform to advance women both personally and professionally at all stages of their careers.

Professor Uloma Onyeka

Department of Food Chemistry & Nutrition
Federal University of Technology, Owerri

I am a seasoned professor of Food Chemistry and Nutrition who has demonstrated keen interest in training women on agro/food entrepreneurship. My "acadepreneur", innovations and experiences promote entrepreneurial approach for women activities in food, as well as increase health consciousness among the women, African kitchen managers. The opportunity given to me by WLI as a resource person to reach out with ideas and innovations to women had tremendous positive impact on the trainees. I have this judgment because a great number of the trainees, including Mrs. Achu, Mrs. Anosike, and Mrs. Ngozi Ibeama expressed personal appreciation to me and am still in contact with them for tutelage as they lunch out their acquired ideas about farming and food processing. WLI training impact some level of encouragement, gives sense of belonging and offer ways to conquer financial, political and health challenges for women. The training is an award winning outreach and should not be allowed to wane down as it is designed to change the narrative of African women socially, financially and politically. I commend WLI, and I am sincerely happy to be their associate.

Prof Nuhu Yaqub

Former Vice Chancellor - University of Abuja
Usmanu Danfodio University, Sokoto.

The quality of the Women Leadership Institute's Master Classes is very fantastic in many respects. In the first instance, the services are well organized and coordinated. (Thanks that the leadership of the Institute is headed by a meticulous, visionary, and an experienced Lady.) Secondly, the resource persons normally engaged are carefully selected. They also, invariably, come to demonstrate competence and dedication in the manner by which they make learning simple and assimilable. Thirdly, as a result of the reputation of the Institute, many students patronize it, convinced that it is worth their while as well as it justifies the resources they put into it, to accomplish knowledge acquisition. Finally, the ambiances of where the instructions take place are conducive, as well. The Women Leadership Institute will always remain my first choice of recommendation for those who require its services!
